

Dear Marlborough Community,

Happy New Year! I'm thrilled to be writing my first monthly construction update as the new Director of the Marlborough Public Library. The first few weeks on the job have been a whirlwind. I'm quickly catching up with where we are in the building construction project and getting to know the amazing library staff that have been working so hard for the community in our temporary space.

A quick summary of my background: I am coming to you from the Newton Free Library where I spent the last 10 years. It was there that I developed my love and passion for public libraries and public service. As a Marlborough resident I'm so happy to be able to serve the community I call my own.

I'm coming on at a pivotal point in the project. Electrical work is well underway, and drywall is being hung. I was able to take a walk through the building and really visualize what's to come. We've been working hard this month to nail down all the new technology that will be available for you to use. I'm blown away by what this new library building will offer, and I think you will be too.

Warm Regards,

Sara Belisle

Director of the Marlborough Public Library
